PERSONAL VS. CORPORATE MEMBERSHIPS:

Memberships are individually represented, regardless of the membership type. The only difference between Personal and Corporate is who legally owns the membership. A Personal membership is issued in the member's name and is non-transferable, with the exception of a transfer under our legacy program to a child or grandchild. A Corporate membership is issued in the company name and owned by the company, who can elect one individual to represent that membership at a time. Should that individual resign or retire, the company would keep the membership and could transfer it to a different employee representative for a transfer fee.
